Brightwell recorded an operating profit of £14.8m for the year to 30 June 2026, up from £3.4m in 2025, with turnover up 27% to £97m, according to its annual report.

The specialist defined benefit (DB) provider's annual report, published yesterday (7 October), showed its operating profit dipped in 2025 from £9.6m to £3.4m before rebounding this year. The group saw net assets increase to £65.6m by the end of June.

Of Brightwell's turnover, £70.2m was attributed to executive advisory, pension administration and investment management services, while £26.8m was for software development, maintenance and support.

The group now administers pensions for around 360,000 members, pays around £3.5bn in benefits each year and manages approximately £33bn of assets

Brightwell, the trading name of BT Pension Scheme Management, also comprises BT Pension Scheme Administration, a wholly-owned subsidiary providing pension administration services, and proprietary software and technology arm Procentia.

Procentia gained new clients in the past year including Royal London and Cook County Pension Fund, as well as launching new products Intelli-ACT, an actuarial valuation platform, and Intelli-PRT to support pension risk transfer transactions. Brightwell invested a further £10m in Procentia over the period.

Brightwell said the year saw significant commercial milestones including a strategic partnership with specialist insurer Rothesay on RothesayOne, a policyholder administration platform used for buyouts.

The company was appointed administration partner to Pensions Insurance Corporation following the £4.3bn buyout of the Rolls-Royce pension scheme, which saw Brightwell open a dedicated office in Derby to support policyholders and retain expertise through existing scheme employees.

The business continued to support the Mineworkers' Pension Scheme and BT Pension Scheme while "expanding its relationships across the growing pensions risk transfer market".

The company also said in its annual report that Procentia is "developing capability developing capability relevant to defined contribution, collective defined contribution and superfund arrangements".

Brightwell chief executive Morten Nilsson said: "The past year has been transformational for Brightwell. We've delivered strong financial results, welcomed new clients, expanded our technology capabilities and continued to invest in the people and services that help pension schemes, members and insurers achieve better outcomes.

"The DB pensions market is changing rapidly. As schemes consider their endgame options, whether that is run-on, buyout or consolidation, demand is growing for partners that can provide consistent support across the pensions lifecycle. Our integrated model, combining investment expertise, administration and technology, positions us strongly to support clients through this transitioning market."
