TPT gets green light to launch as UK's second superfund

Capital buffer in place to fund first £1bn in transactions and 'active discussions' underway

TPT Retirement Solutions has received approval to launch a defined benefit (DB) superfund, meaning the vehicle can be brought to market and progress its first transactions.

The provider's superfund, known as the TPT Retirement Solutions Superfund, achieved a successful outcome following assessment by The Pensions Regulator (TPR).

The company said it had secured the necessary capital to fund £1bn to £1.5bn worth of transactions, which it anticipated would be enough to support "a number of deals", and was in "active discussions" with a "growing number" of interested schemes.

TPT chief executive David Lane called the approval "a landmark moment" for the company and "one of the most significant milestones" in its history.

The consolidator is designed to run on in perpetuity, pooling and investing funds over a longer horizon to share additional surplus with members.

TPT's consolidator is the second superfund to receive regulatory approval after Clara Pensions' 'bridge to buyout' scheme, which successfully cleared TPR assessment in 2021. A statutory framework for DB superfunds was introduced in the Pension Schemes Act 2026.

Edi Truell's Pension SuperFund was the first commercial consolidator, launched in 2018 and wound down in 2023 having failed to secure approval.

In March 2026, TPR told PP it was in early talks with "half a dozen" players looking to enter the superfund market and expected three applications in the coming year.

LCP head of DB consolidation Laura Amin said that TPR confirmed one provider is in assessment and another is soon to begin the process, both operating run on models.

She said these new entrants will create a more competitive market which may result in improvements in pricing.

Lane said: "We are incredibly proud of the proposition we've built and the opportunity it creates to deliver long-term security and value for members."

TPT Superfund trustee board chair and Aretas Trustees partner Nadeem Ladha said: "It has been a privilege to work alongside such a high-calibre trustee board throughout the pre-assessment and assessment process.

"Our focus now, as trustees, is on the future and, above all, on members. We look forward to working with TPT to provide a secure long-term home for DB pension schemes, while giving members the opportunity to share in the value created over time."
